No matter the ill-will or harm. No matter the offense. He sees honor in the name.

A preponderance of his players are African-American. They sense the wrong but are silent, as they rake in millions.

The fans want only a football team to cheer in good times. They want no issue that forces them to declare a position for or against a people. They have put themselves in the shoes of the derided and they are not comfortable. They do not want to be targeted as the reason for his obstinate stance.

The enlightened masses have voiced their concern about the display of such blatant disrespect for others! The masses can rail against me and my moniker. I'll pay them no mind; he thinks defiantly.

Truly he stands alone. He simply does not get it! Perhaps a picture can help . . .
